Mrs. Nation Wants To Get Out.

Mrs. Carrie Nation, tiring of jail life, has written Judge Hazen, at Topeka, Kansas, the following letter: "I want you to quit your fooling," she writes, "and let me out of here. If you cannot do it, I will go myself. I don't feel like ministering angel any more. It is time for you to recover yourself before the devil is your master, and makes a clean sweep with you into Hell. You know you are persecuting one of God's children who loves you for Jesus sake. Let me out that I may go about my business, saving souls, poor devils. Write or come to see me right off."

The Judge very wisely ignored the letter, and placed it in his waste basket, along with dozens of others, and Mrs. Nation will remain in jail.

He Wanted To Help Her.

There is a young man in this city, who has a habit two or three times each day of calling up his best girl over the telephone and talking a conversation with her. The baby taking the two calls has made all the lady operators at the Central office sick, and they are thinking about getting out an injunction to prevent him using the phone.

Yesterday the same old thing occurred, and this is what happened: After a lot of silly talk he said:

"What made you so long in answering me when I rang? I got real nervous."

"Oh," said the sweet young thing, "I was busy, and couldn't come at once. I am very busy now."

"What are you doing, doing?" said the young man. "Tell me, and I will come over and help you."

"Oh, but you couldn't," said the young man. "Now, please tell me."

"Well, if you must know, I'm taken a bath." Central heard the receiver hung up right quick, but whether he went over to help or not they do not know.

Advertising and Other Fakes.

PAID ADS seem to be the Mecca of all fakers. There is not a week passes but what our merchants are the victims of some smooth, talking advertising swindler, and still they bite just as readily at the next bait that is thrown them. Week before last one of these sharpers succeeded in getting about twenty-five of our merchants to invest in an advertisement on a card to be put in the hotels.

After collecting the money all they got in return was a poster picture pasted in the center of a card, around which was the advertisement written in pen and ink. They were laid out the wrong side of the card, and remained there about three days, after being disfigured by comments written on the margin. It may be that in the case of twenty-five years or so from now our merchants will be wakened to the fact that the best place to put their advertisements is in the columns of their local papers, where they will derive some lasting benefit from it.

Another swindler who has been reaping a rich harvest here is the fellow selling "Anti-Falsehood" pills. His scheme is to give samples of very fine goods, which he offers at ridiculously low prices. The housewife gives her order for them, to be paid for on delivery. The "agent" then shows her some table cloths, of which he has "only two left," and offers them at what he calls a "bargain price." The lady is so afraid she will lose her previous bargain that she eagerly buys them at his price, only to find out when she more thoroughly examines them that she has been unhooded. Of course, it is needless to say that her other "bargain" never shows up.

It is a moral to this, namely: Your home merchant with whom you have been dealing for years can not afford to overcharge you for goods, even if he wished to; while the only mission on earth of the itinerant peddler is to get the most out of you he can, knowing that he has no responsibilities to assume in the future, provided he can keep out of the clutches of the law.

Men You Should See Will Be There. The Presidential Inauguration at Washington will attract noted statesmen and persons you read about in the papers every day. Take advantage of the opportunity to see them by going on low rate fare tickets which will be sold via Pennsylvania Short Lines to Washington, March 1st, 2nd and 3rd. C. H. Hagerty, D. P. Agt., Louisville, Ky., or Geo. F. Rockwell, A. G. P. Agt., Cincinnati, O., will answer inquiries about fares and through trains.

Electric Road From Paris to Lexington. The purpose of the corporation as set out in the articles of incorporation, are, in brief, to run an electric railway from Lexington to Nicholasville, twelve miles; to Versailles, twelve miles; to Georgetown, twelve miles; to Paris, eighteen miles; to Winchester, sixteen miles; to Richmond, twenty-six miles.

This will be a good thing for Lexington and her merchants, but we cannot see what benefit it will be to Paris and her citizens, beyond a possible reduction of fare and freight bills between the two places.

Of course, the principal object of the road will be to induce Paris people to go to Lexington to purchase their goods, and there are hundreds of them who will do so. It is an undisputed fact that Paris merchants carry stocks as complete as those of Lexington, and in some cases more so. It is also a fact that their prices are as low if not lower. Yet there are many of people who prefer to buy from Lexington merchants. If you want your town to prosper and not go along forever in the same old rut, patronize your home merchants, and stop running to Lexington or Cincinnati every time you want to buy a pair of shoes or a new dress or a suit of clothes.

STORIES OF THE STAGE.

Coming Attractions, Gossip in the Lobby and Boxes.

A JAY FROM JAYVILLE.

A Jay from Jayville is the title of a rural comedy which is announced to appear at the opera house Thursday night. The company numbers thirty-five people with their own brass band and orchestra. The plot is laid in the rural districts of New England and the many queer things that happen to Uncle Josh, when he takes his first trip to New York, cause no end of laughter. Incidental to the play, numerous specialties will be introduced, one of the most pleasing of which will be the bicycle trick riding of Herrmann. A grand round day parade will be given by the band from Jayville, which is considered the funniest parade ever produced.

A FEAST OF MIRTH AND MELODY.

There is a feast of mirth and melody in store for the fun and music lovers of this city. It will be provided by Frank Daniels, America's most famous comedian, who will make his first appearance here in comic opera next Tuesday. He will present his latest comic opera success, "The Amerer." He has been playing the opera all season from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and besides the many dollars for which he started out, he has reaped the unanimous approval of the press of those cities in which he has appeared. His opera has been pronounced a triumph of musical writing and brilliant wit. His supporting company this season surpasses any that he has had heretofore, and the scenic investiture, including the costumes is said to be an artistic marvel. Victor Herbert is the composer of the music. His name has been made familiar not only by Daniels' former productions, but by the opera produced by the Bostonians and Alice Neilson. Helen Redmond is the prima donna of the opera company this season; Norma Kopp is still the soubrette. Will Danforth the basso, and a young American tenor. Rhys Thomas, who won his spurs in London last season, the "tenor. Owen Westford is the second comedian.

"QUO VADIS."

The scenery displayed in the production of E. J. Carpenter's production of "Quo Vadis" consists principally of the Peristyle in the House of Petronius, the Statue Scene, the Garden of Aulus Plautius, Nero's Palace, Rome; interior of the Marmarite Prison, the Coliseum, the Roman Amphitheatre and Arena; the Burning and Destruction of Rome, and the Death of Nero, the Sign of the Cross and the Dawn of Christianity. While the theme of the play deals principally with a somber subject, the wit of Petronius and Chilo, the Greek philosopher, together with the overwhelming vanity of Nero, cause much amusement. This remarkable play will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Mar. 7, and a packed house is expected.

A Plant Mosquitoes Avoid.

The name of the castor oil plant is not especially suggestive of pleasant things, yet the plant has many excellent qualities, one of which is that it is decidedly ornamental. It grows to a height of four or five feet in temperate climate, but becomes really a tree in warm latitudes and is extremely graceful in form. A more practical merit is the fact that the odor, although not disagreeable to human beings, drives mosquitoes and other insects from its vicinity. This makes it a valuable veranda plant, and in Miami, Fla., where it grows abundantly, it is planted freely near doors and windows.

THE BIGGEST COP.

Chief Kipley Claims Him as a Member of Chicago's Forces.

Chicago claims the biggest policeman in the country. This claim is in answer to a similar one made by St. Louis. Chicago's candidate is certainly a big fellow. His name is Edward E. Martini. He is of German parentage, was born in Wisconsin and is 39 years old. Here are details of his greatness: Weight, 317 1/2 pounds; height, 6 feet 3 inches; chest measurement at forced expiration, 45 inches; at full inspiration, 63 inches; expansion, 8 inches.

The St. Louis candidate, Murray Pearson Davidson, is 22 years old, is 6 feet 2 1/2 inches tall and weighs 235 pounds. Chief Kipley of Chicago wants an official test made to show which is really the better all around man, Davidson or Martini. The former has been on the St. Louis force less than a year, and his friends say that, although the figures

ISLANDS WE WANT.

WHY UNCLE SAM IS BUYING THE DANISH WEST INDIES.

A Tiny Group of the Lesser Antilles, the Danish West Indies, are of great value for naval purposes—The Story of the Bargain.

The Danish West Indies, negotiations for the purchase of which are now being completed, have long been wanted by Uncle Sam. On the map the group figures only as three tiny dots, and all of them in fact, would not make a Texas county if they were put together. Their location, however, makes them valuable to a naval station.

The group forms the northeastern tip of the crescent made by the Lesser Antilles, and they are just east of Porto Rico.

The administration has been anxious ever since the Spanish war to have the Danish West Indies under the American flag, but Denmark has demanded too high a price.

The history of the negotiations for the islands covers a long period of time. As far back as 1857, when our state department endeavored to acquire the islands, a vote was taken among the people of St. Thomas and St. John to determine whether they wanted the islands to be sold to us. Two thousand voted in favor of and less than 50 against the proposition.

At that time Secretary Seward offered $7,500,000 for St. Thomas and St. John alone. Mr. Seward was very eager to make the acquisition, and his secret negotiation with the Danish minister to Washington was begun at a dinner given in that city just before Lincoln's assassination. The treaty of purchase was fully drawn and presented to the senate, but that body refused to confirm it, much to the disgust of Denmark.

Ill luck frowned upon the negotiations almost from the beginning. While a joint commission appointed to visit the islands was making its first meeting in the government house at Christiania, a terrible earthquake and tidal wave damaged the town and scared the commissioners clean out of their wits. The offhand seem to be in favor of the Chicago man, they are confident that Martini will lose in the official test while Davidson can do nothing but gain.

Martini joined the Chicago police force Oct. 17, 1891, and has an exemplary record. He first gained fame by the arrest alone and unarmed of a notorious crook, "Bull" Sheehan, and his pal, who murdered a Hebrew in an alley. Martini picked Sheehan up and used him as a club to knock down the other criminal, already sitting on the two until the wagon came.

During the World's fair Martini was a terror to the levee toughs and for the last two or three years has been attached to Chief Kipley's office.

When the official test will come, has not been decided, but it is to be thorough and conclusive, so that no criticism can be made of the results. So confident is Chief Kipley of the outcome that he may give other cities a chance to send their "biggest," too, just to add to the glories of Martini.

A PICTURESCQUE REBEL.

A Leader of Colombian Revolt Who Is Visiting the United States.

Rafael Uribe-Urbe is a picturesque man from a picturesque country, being a leader in the latest revolutionary movement in Colombia. Just now he is in the United States, and says that the duration of his stay depends on the success of the revolution.

General Uribe-Urbe is a spare, wiry man about 40 years old. He is alert in his movements and in appearance a type of a cool, fearless leader. He is a lawyer and the owner of a coffee plantation.

PALEIS AT LANDING, CHARLOTTE AMALIA.

assassination of the president and murders against him, Seward held up the negotiations for an additional while.

The largest of the islands is St. Thomas, of which the principal seaport is Charlotte Amalia. Behind the bay, the naval center in the islands. The city is built in the shape of a crescent. The pink and white houses behind are terraced one above the other upon steep hills covered with palms and tropical foliage. From ships anchored in the bay or from either of its crescent points the light of the governor's residence reflected in the water present a fine spectacle.

The harbor of Charlotte Amalia can be made the Gibraltar of the West Indies, and the opinions of experts, it is said, are in favor of the acquisition. It has an entrance between two prominent rocks commanded by ancient forts, which mean little today, but which can soon be replaced by modern defenses and upon all closed sides the bay steep hills rise to 1,500 feet and high ground immediately surrounding the harbor to 500 feet. Guns scattered in the tropical shrubbery there would command every vessel in or near the harbor. According to an official who lately investigated the spot, the only defenses guarding this haven are a few ancient sailing guns in barracks upon shore.

Moreover, the harbor can be readily closed against the possible entrance of any foreign craft. A ledge of rock near the mouth serves as a breakwater when hurricanes chance to blow outside. Thence a deep and broad channel a mile long leads to the inner bay, the capital of holding several squadrons. A floating drydock upon the west side of this bay is built in England and transported thence in sections.

The island of Santa Cruz, 40 miles south of St. Thomas, while of little or no strategic value, is the largest and most productive of the three isles. Its population of 20,000 is composed of plantation negroes. Its western half is rectangular, but it tapers to a point on the east. Two cities, each as large as Denver, could be built upon its area of about 100 square miles.

Denmark's governor general of her West Indian possessions, who spends half the year in St. Thomas and the other half in Santa Cruz, administers the affairs of the latter at Christiansted, the capital and principal town. His presence and that of a small garrison are the only evidences of Danish supremacy in the isles today upon the largest island. The only other town of Santa Cruz is Frederiksted, upon the west coast, which can be reached only by very small ships.

Less than 1,000 new subjects would be added to our lists by acquisition of St. John, only six miles due east of St. Thomas. The total area of this, the smallest of the three, is just equal to that of Boston—43 square miles. It is of irregular shape, having upon the eastern end a curved finger of land, including a coral bay and a good harbor, little used except by fishermen. Practically all of the inhabitants dwell in a small town named after the island, Santa Cruz and St. John are both more productive than St. Thomas. They yield sugar, rum, luxuriant tropical fruits and vegetables.

SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Mrs. Highland Alleges a Number of Offenses in Her Petition For Divorce From Her Husband.

What had been a persistent rumor for several weeks in Paris culminated in the fact Friday night, when Mrs. Scotland Highland, through her attorneys Messrs. J. Harry Brent and Claude M. Thomas, filed suit praying for divorce from bed and board from her husband, Mr. Scotland G. Highland, and to perpetually enjoin him from asserting any claim to a deed to one-half of her 600-acre farm in this county, which she claims, he by fraud and misrepresentation induced her to convey to him.

There has been the usual amount of wild and silly stories connected with this unfortunate affair circulated, and we regret to say, published in the daily press. A representative of the News has interviewed both Mr. and Mrs. Highland, and received from each their interpretation of the case. Mr. Highland's defense will be a general denial of all the charges in the petition. He denies that any undue influence was used to induce Mrs. Highland to convey the property to him. Also denies the drunkenness and gambling charges.

Mrs. Highland feels very keenly the many absurd statements that have been printed in regard to the matter, and regrets very much the publicity that has been given to it. One newspaper, in its account, says that Mr. Highland was 26 years old and Mrs. Highland twice his age. Of course, those who have known Mrs. Highland here in Paris as his wife know this to be untrue. A News reporter Mrs. Highland expressed a wish that the many friends and acquaintances she has in Paris will reserve their judgment until after the case is disposed of in court, and then she will prepare a statement, giving all particulars.

Judge Harmon Stitt represents Mr. Highland, and will probably have associated with him either W. C. P. Breckenridge or Hon. Chas. Bronston, of Lexington.

Following is the petition, filed in the office of the Clerk of the Bourbon Circuit Court:

BOURBON CIRCUIT COURT.
Nellie Stoker Highland, Plaintiff, vs. Scotland G. Highland, Defendant.

The plaintiff, Nellie Stoker Highland, states that on the 29th day of July, 1900, she intermarried with the defendant, Scotland G. Highland; that for more than one year last past before the filing of this petition, in fact during her whole life, she has continuously resided and had her only habitation in this Bourbon County, Kentucky, and she is now an actual resident thereof; that the defendant is also now a resident of said county; that the causes for divorce upon which this action is founded occurred and existed in this State and county, and existed within five years next preceding the commencement of this action; that from the date of her marriage she lived with the defendant as his wife as long as she could do so with any hope of happiness in their material relations, to-wit: until the 16th day of February, 1901, when she left him and his home, and ever since that time she has lived separately and apart from him. Before this defendant, as early as August last, began and has since continued to treat her with great and cruel unkindness. He has never offered her a home, he has lived at her home and expense and without her authority or consent; has used her property, means and credit to indulge in dissipation by drinking and gambling. Said defendant also, a few days after their marriage, while they were on their bridal trip, at Adelle City, away from her kindred, friends and advisors, by fraud and misrepresentation and the improper exercise of his influence over her induced and persuaded her to execute and deliver to him, without any valuable consideration, a deed conveying to him a large portion of her real estate in this county, to-wit: nearly as plaintiff can remember, not having seen said statement since it was executed, the undivided one-half of her farm of about 600 acres lying on the waters of Stoner and Houston creeks, a little North-west of and near the city of Paris.

Wherefore, in consideration of the premises, plaintiff prays for a divorce from bed and board; that the defendant be perpetually enjoined from asserting any claim under said deed or to interfere with her exclusive use and control of said farm, and for all other proper relief.

Petition for Bosley's Pardon.
A PETITION was being circulated yesterday, directed to President McKinley, asking him to exercise executive clemency in behalf of J. L. Bosley. Very few to whom it was presented refused to sign, and up to 6 o'clock last night there were over three hundred signatures attached to the paper, representing the leading citizens of Paris, irrespective of politics. Following is the wording of the petition:

TO HIS EXCELLENCY, WILLIAM MCKINLEY, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES:

We the undersigned citizens of Paris and Bourbon county, Kentucky, would most respectfully represent that Mr. John L. Bosley, late Postmaster in the City of Paris, was recently convicted in the District Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky on the charge of embezzling funds while acting as such postmaster, and, as we are advised, judgment in his case has been suspended until some time in the month of March next.

The facts developed upon the trial of his case in said court upon said charge wholly failed to develop any criminal intent, evil purpose or any desire whatsoever, to defraud the Government of the United States of any amount whatever, but his shortage, which has been fully paid and settled with the Government, as we believe was occasioned, by mismanagement and lack of good business methods upon the part of himself and his associates. We do further represent that he has been for many years last past a resident of this city and county, that his reputation in the community in which he has lived has always been that of an upright, honest and law-abiding citizen; and we do now believe him to be a man of the highest integrity, honest, upright and conscientious, and we would most respectfully urge upon your excellency the exercise of executive clemency in his behalf, and would most respectfully request that he be granted an absolute pardon.

Witness our hands this 23rd of December, 1901.

LOVE FORSAKEN.
I was with little Gertrude,
Dreaming the world a lovely lot to me,
An eye for which the sun had lost its smile.
There was a garden place
Where, in the morning, she blossomed every grace
That man might gaze to look upon her face.
And, ah, the golden store
Of happiness that it brought me! That is over
Since she turned away from me.
I shall go down the years,
Groping through sorrow's mists and crawling fears,
To find the world as I found it then.
—Clifton Sordani in Harper's Bazar.

A Maid to Order.

A Story Touching on the Servant Question.

The table was charming. The pearls of expense of damask that folded it was one of the Misses Dornon's most treasured possessions, saved out of a general wreck of family fortunes. The old fashioned silver, of those inimitable patterns which no modern shop can supply, gleamed like irregularly shaped planets at intervals across the cloth.

Moreover, a daffodil bulb cherished in winter with warmth had obligingly thrown out a handful of blossoms. This pot, sheathed in yellow tissue paper, made a thoroughly attractive centerpiece. "It is simply lovely," said Winifred, with a little sigh of relief and satisfaction. "I shall be so glad to have it." To have Mrs. Caulkington's eagle eye turned upon it, even though you are a candidate for her secretaryship, Isabel, and so much depends upon making a good impression.

"The house couldn't fail to make a good impression," Isabel broke in. "It is clean and sweet and old fashioned from top to toe. One can't say that a house has a tone. There's just one thing lacking. I do wish we had a good maid to wait on the table. I hate those embarrassing breaks in a home luncheon where you are obliged to get off in the middle of a sentence and go into the kitchen to bring the broiled squab course to table."

"Yes, that's always wretchedly embarrassing," Isabel agreed. "It's hard on the guests that the hostess too. However, there's no help for it. We don't keep a maid, and this suburb isn't a place where you can find a girl to call in for a day at a time. It's a pity, but it can't be helped."

"What is a pity, but can't be helped?" demanded the youngest Miss Dornon, who brought into the room just in time to hear the last half of the sentence. "Isabel and I were lamenting that we didn't have a maid to serve the luncheon, Gertrude. We were saying how desperately embarrassing it is to be obliged to go into the kitchen to bring the next course to table."

"I never thought of that," Gertrude acquiesced in a disappointed tone. "Our entertaining has always been so informal we're likely to make the guests change the plates and bring in the courses from the kitchen themselves. But it's true, as you say, that kind of thing won't do when we're entertaining Mrs. Caulkington. She's so critical that her eyes burn holes in anything they fall on. We wouldn't mind her little peculiarities if she were merely an acquaintance, but if Isabel is going to demand a big fat salary she must make a big fat impression. I'm sure Mrs. Caulkington would cut her down half if she knew how poor we are and how badly we need that secretaryship. Something must be done."

"Gertrude, dear, you know perfectly well that nothing can be done. There are only two hours left, and in any case you can't secure a girl here in the country to come in for just one day."

"I know that, but what if my dear! An idea dawns in my brain! Let it mature!"

"An idea for what? For getting us a maid?"

"Yes, my dear—a ready maid, so to speak."

"Surely! Do you think Isabel and I have time to waste upon your vapors?"

"A ready maid—no, a maid to order! Don't talk to me for three minutes. I feel the idea grow in my cerebrum, and it really is a good one."

The young lady sat down in the little oak window seat and buried her face in her hands.

Three minutes later she sprang up and pounced triumphantly around the charming table.

"Huzza! I've solved the problem," she cried. "And I'll stand for it that you shall have a maid to serve Mrs. Caulkington's luncheon. A stunning maid, well trained, light footed, soft voiced; a maid who will not send so much as one plate of raw oysters down the back of your guest who will do things without diagrams and will not cause the downfall and destruction of precious willow pattern china. In fact, the maid I propose to offer you will be an explanatory key with copious illustrations to the entire servant question."

Gertrude's sisters were very far from despising the girl's ready imagination. It had often helped to solve an economic problem which they themselves had abandoned in despair. But this crisis of the maid to order seemed considerably beyond Gertrude even, and they frankly announced themselves skeptical.

"Do you mean to look for your remarkable maid here in the suburb or elsewhere?" they demanded.

"I shall procure her in the city, or rather, I shall go on a trip to the city, and I will send the maid to you in my absence."

"But, Gertrude! If you leave now for the city you won't have time, child. The Midway City Council has fixed the tax rate for 1901 in Midway at fifty cents on each $100 of property."

to get back for Mrs. Caulkington's luncheon."

"I'm not afraid, but I'm glad of an excuse to absolve myself. I'm in awe of Mrs. Caulkington, and I tremble before the glare of her longnettes. You can make my excuses to Mrs. Caulkington and tell her that I was obliged to go into the city on pressing business."

It seemed an injustice that Gertrude should not be there to witness the success of the occasion for which they had all worked so hard.

The older girls reasoned, pleaded, represented, but Gertrude stood firm.

Mrs. Caulkington's critical eyes were already boring holes in the drawing room furniture, and the luncheon hour was but three minutes in the future.

Isabel, in her prettiest silk waist, was arranging the oyster plates upon the table preliminary to ushering their guest into the dining room.

Suddenly a purling of gingham skirts brushed the silence of the place, and a soft voice sounded in Isabel's ear.

"If you please, miss," said the voice, "Miss Gertrude does send me. I am de maid to order."

"Good gracious!" shrieked Isabel under her breath. She started back, the oyster plate in her hand narrowly escaping herself.

She said "Good gracious" once more, and very fervently, when she turned, for there, not a yard from her side, waiting to be assigned to her duties, stood the most desirable of colored waitresses.

She was tall, well poised and, barring her skin, a strikingly handsome young woman. Her pink gingham gown fitted to perfection and closely resembled one worn by Gertrude for mornings on the porch. Her dainty ruffled apron was strikingly like one which Isabel herself wore while sewing.

Perched saucily in her black, ripply hair she wore a bit of a cap, which, when examined at close range, seemed to be nothing more than a tuft of white lace cleverly pinned.

Isabel took a second look at her new acquisition and dropped into a chair, laughing weakly.

"Miss Gertrude does send me, miss," the maid repeated softly, "as she said to 'yo' to jest go set in de parlor an leave all de servin to me."

"Oh, Gertrude, Gertrude!" gurgled Isabel. "What nonsense won't that child attempt?"

The luncheon was faultlessly served. Never waitress quicker, lighter, softer, more all seeing, more graceful.

Even the critical Mrs. Caulkington was impressed.

Afterward, when the luncheon party had adjourned to the drawing room, the guest deliberately led around to the subject of domestics.

"Do you find it as hard to get good girls in the suburbs as we do in the city?" she asked. "I imagine not, for that young waitress of yours is perfection itself."

"Well, good girls are very scarce here," answered Isabel, "and I've no doubt we'd have endless trouble if we had to change. But, you see, we have raised Anne, and she knows our own ways and suits us perfectly. We've had her for more than ten years. I know she'll never leave us—unless, of course, she marries and has a home of her own."

"My dear girl, you simply have a treasure," cried the visitor, with warmth. "If I were in your place, I would shiver at the very thought of losing her. And, do you know, since I've seen how perfectly your little table is arranged and served I'm really afraid to ask what she'll do with her when she comes to me in the city. I hope you will close your eyes to a number of things in my housekeeping, Miss Isabel."

"Oh, I am not critical, Mrs. Caulkington," laughed Isabel. "And every one knows how hard it is to get maids like Anna nowadays."—What to Eat.

Neglected Dryden.

Notwithstanding Lowell's high praise of Dryden's prose works and the accusation he brings against literary plunderers of this magazine of letters 200 years ago, few people except scholars now ever open Dryden's essays, though they are well worth careful perusal and study; in spite of Swift's malicious and witty lines:

Read all the pieces of Dryden.
For these are critics' little handle in,
Though merely wit at first for filling
To raise the volume's price a shilling.

There is truth as well as wit in this characterization. For Dryden was in some respects but a literary hack, although a man of genius. But, being a genius, it was impossible for him to write anything, however carelessly and slipshod, without something finding its way in that will arrest the reader's attention even yet, after the lapse of two centuries. Unlike the other and smaller literary hacks of his time, whatever Dryden wrote he wrote freely, and there is an absence of cramped formulas and of pedantic utterances, as a rule, which is interesting. Even in his shilling prefates to which Swift alludes the reader will have no difficulty in discovering a man of genius, one of many lovable traits and great characteristics, and at least Dryden's own likings and judgments are set forth pleasantly and frequently in a convincing manner. He is one of the old writers that weary moderns gibe up to novel reading could profitably turn back to and peruse to their own great advantage.—Exchange.

The Athenians dine late the year round, and, whenever the weather will permit, in the open air. As the heated season advances the dinner hour is set later and later until in August 9:30 or 10 becomes the common thing. Fancy going to the theater after that! Yet the open air performances are liberally patronized, and they do not begin, of course, until after dinner. The legend "Curtain rises promptly at 9" is a snare and a delusion, as many a foreigner has found, to his extreme annoyance.

The out of door dining and the sky roofed theaters are so typically Greek that they serve as a link between modern and classical times. The old Greek, as everybody knows, was an outdoor man, his house serving as little more than a sleeping place and storeroom.

The Athenian of today dines in a garden, on his terrace or in a park. If he is too poor to possess any of these accessories, he sets his table upon the sidewalk. Many of the cheap restaurants appropriate the walks for dining rooms. One is often compelled when taking an evening stroll to dodge in and out among dozens of tables covered with reasonably clean linen and lighted by means of candles, whose flames are protected from the wind by means of glass globes.—Scribner's.

Doctors' "Cat Naps."

The "cat naps" indulged in by the late Dr. William Pepper constituted a standing joke among his intimate friends. He had the faculty of going to sleep at will and waking up when he wished. He would sometimes when under a mental strain keep a roomful of patients waiting while he slept in his private office for three minutes or five minutes, or as long as he wished. Then he would resume his duties, greatly refreshed.

Another prominent physician has a queer habit of napping, although he only takes one a day and does so directly after luncheon, which with him is a hearty meal. He repairs to his office and throws himself in a chair at a point where the polished wood floor is not covered by the rug. He holds a bunch of keys between the forefinger and thumb of his right hand, and is allowed to hang loosely over the arm of the chair. Then he dozes off, but it is never more than a doze, for the moment his fingers relax the keys drop to the bare floor, acting as an alarm clock.

It is scarcely a nap—just a brief relaxation of the mental and physical faculties. The doctor calls it his siesta, and if he misses it he says he doesn't feel quite himself for the rest of the day.—Philadelphia Record.

Charles's Aunt.

Mr. Penley, otherwise Charles's Aunt, told the following: "A military man, a friend of Mr. Penley, took his daughter to the stalls and, having a busy and tiring day, went calmly to sleep in his easy seat during the interval between the curtain raiser and 'Charles's Aunt.' The daughter sympathetically allowed him to remain in peace until the curtain went up for the commencement of the play of the evening; then she gently nudged him in the ribs and whispered 'Charles's Aunt' to remind him of his whereabouts."

The gentleman still slept on, and his daughter tried again. She gave her father an extra push and murmured, with emphasis: "Papa, do wake up 'Charles's Aunt'!"

"This time it was effectual, for the colonel leaped to his feet and cried, 'Bless me, so it is!' and began to shake hands furiously with a demure old lady who happened to be passing along the stalls in front of him on the way to her allotted seat. 'Bless me, so it is! How do you do, madam? And how is Charles?'—London Answers.

Russell and the Solicitor.

It is said that once when the late Lord Russell, then Sir Charles, was on circuit, he became so indignant with every one in general and his solicitor client in particular that he seized his large and heavy brief and smote the solicitor on the head with it. The solicitor indignantly collected his papers and hurried out of court, murmuring that he would never brief Sir Charles again.

Some time afterward a shipping magnate came to the same solicitor with a big case. "Brief Russell," he said. The solicitor said he was sorry, but it was impossible, as Russell had never apologized. "Then give me my papers," said the shipowner, "and I'll go to some one who will."

Eventually the unhappy man of law, not wishing to lose his best client, had to apologize to Sir Charles Russell for leaving the court when assaulted.—Pearson's Weekly.

"So On."

Lady Dorothy Nevill is one of the wildest women in London society. Some time ago there was a rich and ambitious man in society who went in for entertaining largely and especially for making his parties interesting and representative. A marked falling out began to take place after while in the quality of his guests. Lady Dorothy, commenting on this deterioration, said: "Once we used to meet Browning and Whistler and Henry James and so on there; but now we only meet—'So On'—Chambers' Journal.

CATARRH

Catarrh has become such a common disease that a person entirely free from this disgusting complaint is seldom met with. It is the customary result of Catarrh as nothing more serious than a bad cold, a simple inflammation of the nose and throat. It is, in fact, a complicated and very dangerous disease; if not at first, it very soon becomes so.

The blood is quickly contaminated by the foul secretions, and the poison through the general circulation is carried to all parts of the system.

Salves, washes and sprays are unsatisfactory and disappointing, because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. does. It cleanses the blood of the poison and eliminates from the system all catarrhal secretions, and thus cures thoroughly and permanently the worst cases.

Mr. T. A. Williams, a leading dry-goods merchant of Spartanburg, S. C., writes: "For years I had a severe case of Catarrh, with all the disagreeable effects which belong to that disease, and which make life painful and uncomfortable. I tried all the medicines prescribed by my friends, but without getting any better. I then began to take S. S. S., and it cured me effect, and cured me effect, and cured me effect."

is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known, and the greatest of all blood medicines and tonics.

If you have Catarrh don't wait until it becomes deep-seated and chronic, but begin at once the use of S. S. S., and send for our book on Blood and Skin Diseases and write our physicians about your case.
